Making Practice Based Learning Work &
Learning in the Workplace

Chris Turnock (Northumbria University)
Background to MPBLW Project

Project Aim:

- To make practitioners more effective at supporting & supervising students in the workplace across a range of healthcare disciplines
Project Phases

Phase One:
• Identification and documentation of good practice on how practitioners are prepared for their educational role.
  • Inform development of learning materials for use by practitioners.

Phase Two:
• Design, pilot and implement resources to:
  a. enhance preparation of practice supervisors.
  b. meet the needs of culturally diverse health & social care teams.
Project Phases

Phase Three:
• Review developed resources.
• Disseminate and embed the project outcomes in a planned and comprehensive manner within and across health and social care disciplines.

Transferability Phase:
• To transfer an existing resource for development of work-based educators to non health disciplines.
