

Northumbria Research Link

Citation: Fenwick, John (2011) Managing Local Government under the Coalition : Rowing, Steering or Going Under? In: Northumbria Research Conference, 5-6 May 2011, Northumbria University, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

URL:

This version was downloaded from Northumbria Research Link:
<https://nrl.northumbria.ac.uk/id/eprint/3320/>

Northumbria University has developed Northumbria Research Link (NRL) to enable users to access the University's research output. Copyright © and moral rights for items on NRL are retained by the individual author(s) and/or other copyright owners. Single copies of full items can be reproduced, displayed or performed, and given to third parties in any format or medium for personal research or study, educational, or not-for-profit purposes without prior permission or charge, provided the authors, title and full bibliographic details are given, as well as a hyperlink and/or URL to the original metadata page. The content must not be changed in any way. Full items must not be sold commercially in any format or medium without formal permission of the copyright holder. The full policy is available online: <http://nrl.northumbria.ac.uk/policies.html>

This document may differ from the final, published version of the research and has been made available online in accordance with publisher policies. To read and/or cite from the published version of the research, please visit the publisher's website (a subscription may be required.)

Managing Local Government under the Coalition: Rowing, Steering or Going Under?

Professor John Fenwick, Newcastle Business School

This paper will consider the current challenges confronting managers and leaders in local government. Starting with Osborne and Gaebler's familiar dictum that public sector managers should be 'steering' (co-ordinating) rather than 'rowing' (controlling) local public services, the paper will ask whether even 'steering' has now become impossible under an increasing fragmentation of services (as in current changes to schools), a renewed emphasis on 'localism' (as in dismantling of regional planning and central performance systems) and yet another attempt to create new political management structures for our cities (as in current plans for directly elected executive mayors). If local government has long since stopped rowing, and is now no longer steering, is it going under? If so, what are the implications for our communities and for local governance and accountability?

The paper falls within the category 'People, Business and Society' and is intended to be of interest to a social science audience from several Schools across the University.