Background to MPBLW Project

Project Aim:

• To make practitioners more effective at supporting & supervising students in the workplace across a range of healthcare disciplines
Project Phases

Phase One:
• Identification and documentation of good practice on how practitioners are prepared for their educational role.

• Inform development of learning materials for use by practitioners.

Phase Two:
• Design, pilot and implement resources to:
  a. enhance preparation of practice supervisors.
  b. meet the needs of culturally diverse health & social care teams.
Project Phases

Phase Three:
• Review developed resources.
• Disseminate and embed the project outcomes in a planned and comprehensive manner within and across health and social care disciplines.

Transferability Phase:
• To transfer an existing resource for development of work-based educators to non health disciplines.

Using the Resources

Disseminating information about the resources

• Consider the nature & content of the resources

• Identify three ways in which information about the resources might be disseminated to support learning in the workplace

• Discuss your ways with group members and agree three in which the resources might be disseminated

• Feedback group decision
Main Issues

1. How can health care professionals effectively use these outputs?

2. Should their use be discipline specific?

3. What strategies would promote continued use of the materials to enhance practice based learning?
